TECHNICIAN

JOB DESCRIPTION

Employees in this job participate in a variety of non-supervisory technical activities. Work is performed through the application of a body of knowledge related to practices, procedures, methods, policies, theories, and concepts of a specific technical field. Work is performed under close supervision and assignments are reviewed in progress. Well-defined methods and procedures in the form of laws, regulations, rules, policies, etc. are provided, and employees must exercise independent judgment in applying the proper courses of action. If the Appointing Authority does not certify that the employee is satisfactorily performing at the level required for the specific technical job, the employee will be retained in the State Transitional Business and Administrative Technician classification until performance can be certified.

Upon appointment, the employee shall maintain their current rate of pay if it is less than the maximum of the State Transitional Business and Administrative Technician pay range and less than the maximum of the technician job where will be moved. If the employee is paid more than the maximum of the State Transitional Business and Administrative Technician pay range or more than the maximum of the pay grade for the technician job where the employee will be moved, the employee shall be paid the lesser of these two rates upon appointment. Also, reference the compensation rules and regulations.

Employees possessing status and the required experience enter a new technical career as a State Transitional Business and Administrative Technician. After the minimum training period and demonstration of satisfactory service, the employee may be moved to the appropriate level in the new technical classification, in accordance with classification rules, regulations, and procedures. The appointing authority may elect to retain the employee in the State Transitional Business and Administrative Technician class if the employee is not functioning at the level required for reallocation to the appropriate class for the position.
